Syrian gunners attack U.S. jets in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - U.S. jets came under attack for the first time in Lebanon yesterday when Syrian gunners fired missiles at carrier-based planes. At Beirut airport, small-arms fire hit Marine positions.

Pressure mounted on Yasser Arafat to leave the northern city of Tripoli and end the Palestinian guerrilla war that has killed at least 1,000 people. The PLO chief said he might return to Tunisia.

Syria said its missile batteries in central Lebanon drove off four U.S. F-14 Tomcats. No hits were reported. Lebanese radio stations said the Syrian firing began in the early morning when the jets scrambled from the carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower on reconnaissance sorties.

Assistant White House press secretary Anson Franklin, with President Reagan in Tokyo, said the jets were on a "routine" mission when they came under fire from an unidentified ground site in central Lebanon. He did not specify the type of fire, but Beirut radios said surface-to-air missiles were used.

AMERICAN MARINES came under small-arms fire in the afternoon along the eastern perimeter of their base at Beirut airport. The Marines returned fire and the shooting ended in about 2 1/2 minutes with no casualties, said Marine spokesman Capt. Wayne Jones.

The shooting heightened tension that has been escalating since suicide bombings killed 239 American and 58 French troops in Beirut Oct. 23, and 28 Israelis and 32 Lebanese prisoners in Tyre Nov. 4. The U.S., French and Israeli governments blame Moslem fanatics operating behind Syrian lines in Lebanon.

Italy yesterday ordered two helicopter-equipped warships to stand by for a possible evacuation of Arafat from Tripoli, where a cease-fire collapsed less than 24 hours after it was arranged by oil-rich Arab nations. Rockets and artillery fire poured on residential neighborhoods of the port 50 miles north of Beirut.

Rashid Karami, a former prime minister and a prominent Sunni Moslem politician from Tripoli, said Arafat "should be out of Tripoli at this crucial time so that he can work with his brothers on confronting the dangers threatening the revolution."

Karami, currently in Damascus and unable to return to his home because of the fighting, said the Palestine Liberation Organization leader "must leave Tripoli." He added that he reached this conclusion after talks with "parties concerned in the fighting."

Arafat has repeatedly said he would leave Tripoli if asked to do so, and reiterated yesterday: "I will leave if the people of Tripoli ask me to leave. I am a guest here."

Reach for help in personal crisis

Inner struggle common before suicide

Editor's note: This is the second in a three-part series dealing with suicide. This article deals with one student's personal experience with suicide. Due to the sensitive nature of the subject, the name has been changed.

by Geoffrey Barnard
reporter

When meeting Jean, a University senior, one gets the picture of a person busy enjoying her final year of college. Jean has a job on campus, a contagious smile, and a ready complement for anyone she meets.

A passing observer would hardly believe Jean could ever have a care in the world.

In February, Jean, 22, tried to kill herself.

The personal crisis that led Jean to becoming suicidal, as is any personal crisis, was unique. The inner struggle that she confronted, however, is common to a suicidal person.

While working her job as a night guard, Jean was sexually assaulted. She did not report the incident or tell her friends.

"I was paranoid of everyone and everything. I kept it all in and I didn't tell anyone. Part of me was afraid to tell and part of me was ashamed," Jean said.

Failure to reach out for help when trying to deal with a crisis is a major factor that leads people to suicide.

WHEN SOMEONE cannot deal successfully with their problem, the situation begins to look hopeless and the person looks to suicide as an answer, Marvin Kumler, associate professor of psychology, said.

"I felt very dirty, worthless," Jean said. "I perceived it to be something I would never get away from. It took over my thoughts, which took over my life."

Jean did not imagine beforehand that suicide was anything she would ever consider.

"It was not something that I had thought about," Jean said. "I had been wishing that I didn't have to handle my situation."

"Then I decided I'd rather be dead, which was a strange feeling. I had never before wanted to die."

For a week before trying to commit suicide, Jean said she felt numb and helpless.

"I had resigned myself to the fact that my obsession would be with me forever," she said.

"I WANTED to do it (kill herself) more than I cared how they (her family and friends) would feel. I guess what I thought was 'I'm going to miss you, but too bad.' ... so I took as many pills as I could fit in my hand."

After waking in Wood County Hospital with her stomach pumped, Jean claims her will to die persisted.

"If a person wants to die, no amount of talking or counseling is going to prevent (them) ... from trying."

"It took a few weeks of counseling to instill in me the will to live. ... I remained in counseling for the rest of the school year," Jean said.

Jean's outlook has drastically changed since undergoing counseling.

"It took me a while to realize that life goes on," Jean said. "If something keeps popping up in your head, you've got to find another way to get rid of it. Life is valuable. Life is worth living."

Toledo women leading Ohioans in top positions

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) - The election of Donna Owens as mayor means most of Toledo's top elected officials at the federal, state and local government levels are women, something political observers said yesterday is no accident.

"If you have a well-qualified candidate and they just so happen to be a female, they tend to do very well at the ballot box," Lucas County Republican Chairman Michael Baker said.

"Good-quality women who are willing to run start off with a pretty good edge. I don't know if you can put a numerical (percentage) on it."

The election of Owens, a Republican city councilwoman, as mayor of Ohio's fourth-largest city sewed up the last of three top political posts for women in northwestern Ohio.

Sen. Marigene Valiquette, a Democrat, is the state senator representing Toledo, and Rep. Marcy Kaptur, also a Democrat, represents the city and surrounding area in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Harry Kaiser, a spokesman for Kaptur, said the congresswoman was pleased by Owens' election, despite their party difference and Kaptur's endorsement last week of Owens' male opponent.

"SHE SEES the election victories for women as a healthy trend for the country and even more indications that women are becoming full participants as voters and as candidates," Kaiser said of his boss.

Kaiser said Kaptur and Owens talked Wednesday by telephone and traded war stories about political campaigns.

"She told me I should take a vacation immediately," Owens, who ignored gender as an issue during her campaign, said. She won the election with nearly 59 percent of the vote over Democratic councilman Peter Ujvagi.

In addition to the mayor's post, two women were newly elected to City Council on Tuesday, a third councilwoman was re-elected and Owens will remain a member of that body as mayor. Thus, women will hold four of the nine council seats after swearing in Dec. 1.

"There never has been much male chauvinism in Toledo politics," John Gillespie, a political science professor at the University of Toledo, said.

"For city council, the elections seem pretty natural. Most of the women elected are not working other full-time jobs."

"There has nearly always been a woman on council and she has always been a big vote-getter," Gillespie said. "We've had a lot of women judges down through the years. It's always been a pretty hospitable place for women candidates."

Kaptur said the election of women to key positions in Toledo has shown "the progressive nature of the Midwest electorate. Women are seen as both credible and electable candidates."

Bus strike continues

by Jeff James
staff reporter

Anyone wanting to leave Bowling Green this weekend should find some other form of transportation if they were planning on using the Greyhound Bus Lines. The company's drivers are currently in the 10th day of a nationwide strike.

The drivers union walked out after they refused to accept a 1.9 percent pay and benefit cut from the bus line.

According to Linda Klein, spokesperson for Greyhound, the company had to cut costs in order to stay in competition with other transportation systems.

"Last year we lost $16.3 million," Klein said. "We needed relief to compete with regional bus and airlines."

Klein said Greyhound will start to run their buses again in mid-November to the major routes, with or without the old employees.

"We have had 50,000 applicants for only 12,000 positions since the strike started," Klein said. "None of the new applicants has been hired, but we have started training centers in case we need to hire people. Hopefully, our old employees will come back to their positions. I am optimistic that they will," she added.

LOCALLY, the strike has not affected people wishing to go to major destinations. However, Greyhound's competition is not running buses to places left stranded by the walk out.

Willis Gill, a Trailways Bus line ticket agent in Toledo, said his company is not re-routing buses to cover the places Greyhound usually runs.

"Right now, we are running two or three buses to places where we might have only one before the strike," Gill said. "Other companies may be routing buses to these places, but we are not."

G. Z. Avery, owner of the Bowling Green bus terminal, said the loss of the Greyhound route has hurt him financially.

"Trailways (which runs through Bowling Green, as does Greyhound) does not go everywhere that Greyhound goes," Avery said. "For example, Trailways runs a route to Cleveland only once a day. Greyhound had a route going there three times a day. Since Cleveland is where 75 percent of my business goes, it's bound to make me lose money," he added.

7 Democrats want Reagan impeached

WASHINGTON (AP) - Seven Democratic members of Congress charged yesterday that President Reagan violated the Constitution in ordering U.S. troops into Grenada last month, and called for his impeachment.

The congressmen cited Article I, which grants Congress the right to declare war, and other sections that cover U.S. treaty obligations and the rights of its citizens.

The president's invasion of Grenada is illegal and unconstitutional and, I am convinced, is an impeachable offense," one of the six, Rep. Ted Weiss of New York, said. "This resolution is being introduced ... after Congress has exhausted other remedies."

The other congressmen were John Conyers Jr. of Michigan; Julian Dixon and Mervyn Dymally of California; Henry Gonzalez and Mickey Leland of Texas, and Parren Mitchell of Maryland.

editorial Storm looming

It's brewing. In the Mediterranean a storm whose aftermath no one can predict is forming.

U.S. military forces have been building all week to a point where 30,000 sailors, marines and airmen are aboard two aircraft carriers there with another one on its way from the Caribbean.

The United States is amassing a show of strength, but we fear President Reagan will go beyond a display of force to an escalation of our involvement in Lebanon. That his spokesmen have made a point of not discounting the possibility of a retaliation for the attack on Marine headquarters last month fuels our disquiet.

We are not alone in our apprehension. The European members of the peacekeeping force in Beirut, Great Britain, France and Italy, also fear the United States will push into the area. These countries are devoted to maintaining the mission in Beirut as a peacekeeping one and have agreed to keep their combined forces of some 4,000 men there as long as no intervention in the Lebanese factional fighting occurs. But they fear what Reagan is planning.

We hope Reagan is engaging in psychological warfare, but we cannot quiet our minds with that somewhat desperate trust.

Landing those troops will commit us to an all-out war. The Syrians and Lebanese factions will see it as a military offensive and meet it head on. Syria's reported firing on U.S. F-14 jets flying daily reconnaissance missions yesterday shows they are not afraid to challenge the United States. And they have the fire power to put up resistance. News reports from Lebanon describe Syria's Soviet Union supplied arms as threatening to U.S. Navy ships.

While potential U.S. foes in Lebanon are not as well equipped as the Americans and Israelis are, U.S. retaliation there will be met strongly. This is not Grenada and Reagan should keep the extras on the sidelines. If he moves in, the resultant war could become too big for him.

Jackson may have lost support of Jewish voter

by Sharon Cohen

The Rev. Jesse Jackson stretched wide his arms in welcoming the hurt and rejected in his presidential campaign. But his embrace holds little warmth for perhaps the most vote-conscious of America's minorities.

Leaders of America's Jewish community - many of whom have marched arm in arm with Jackson in civil rights protests - say the newly announced presidential candidate now is out of step with them.

Jewish opposition stems largely from Jackson's views on the Middle East. Years ago, the civil rights leader created a furor among many Jewish groups when he publicly hugged Yasser Arafat, the Palestine Liberation Organization leader, and called for an independent Palestinian state.

"His past record is not one that will endear him to the Jewish voter," said Rabbi William Berkowitz, head of the American Jewish Heritage Committee.

Jackson's 1979 meeting with Arafat is just one source of the Jewish community's irritation. The civil rights leader also has criticized Jewish reporters and made statements some regard as insensitive to the enormity of the Holocaust.

Jackson says he is neither anti-Semitic nor anti-Israel and has been misunderstood. Though his Mideast views may be unorthodox for an American politician, he said, "My appeal is a moral appeal... not a tradeoff for votes."

But Jewish voters - many of them concentrated in cities where Jackson is likely to campaign - have traditionally been important to the Democrats. Morris Amitay, former director of the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee, said about 90 percent of registered Jews vote in elections - higher than any other minority group.

"Normally the kind of support a black would receive (from Jews) won't be there," Amitay said of Jackson's campaign.

Blacks and Jews were allies in the civil rights movements of the 1960s, but have split on issues which developed later, such as affirmative action quotas for hiring and school admissions.

That split over domestic issues still appears secondary to what is the No. 1 concern for many Jewish leaders - Israel.

Jackson says he suffers from "a misperception" of his Mideast positions.

"I support without equivocation Israel's right to exist," Jackson said, but added: "I do support a state of Palestinian people. The more that they wander aimless as nomads, the more dangerous and desperate they become."

"When we met with Arafat, we did not endorse him or his tactics. We challenged him to recognize Israel's right to exist... We need to be looking at a mutual recognition policy."

Jackson was heckled by members of the Jewish Defense League when he announced his candidacy and a few days later when he addressed members of the American Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee.

Jackson has other problems with Jewish voters. There have been statements attributed to Jackson that "he's sick and tired of hearing about the Holocaust," Nathan Perlmutter, executive director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said.

Jackson said those comments, made during his Mideast trip, were taken out of context and he never intended to "injure anyone's feelings."

He compared the issue to the black experience in America. Jackson said if he were to relive the trauma of slavery all the time, "it would have the effect of making me too bitter to function."

In 1979, Jackson criticized some Jewish journalists in Chicago, suggesting his Mideast trip didn't receive favorable coverage because there were no Arabs or Palestinian reporters at major newspapers or television stations.

"I have seen very few Jewish reporters that have the capacity to be objective about Arab affairs," he had said.

What Jackson wanted, said press aide Frank Watkins, was more balanced coverage and recognition that he is not an enemy to legitimate Jewish aspirations.

Jackson noted that in 1978, when a small group of Nazis threatened to march in the northern Chicago suburb of Skokie - the home of thousands of concentration camp survivors - he was there, linking hands with the Jews.

"I have had, across the years, great relationships with the Jewish community," he said.

Calling for a Mideast dialogue only reinforces that position, Jackson said.

Looking at Esquire's 50 great

by Garry Wills

It was strange to see such different people in the same room. Here, at last, the lion was at rest beside the lamb, Muhammad Ali the punisher beside Dr. Jonas Salk the healer. Ralph Nader was present, the only man who did what the rest of us wanted to - defy the instructions to come in black tie. William Paley of CBS took his bow after Philip Johnson, the architect. Carl Bernstein, Betty Friedan, Dr. Benjamin Spock were in attendance. Nixon sent his regrets, to the relief of some who invited him.

The occasion was the release of Esquire magazine's 50th-anniversary issue, which celebrates "50 Who made the Difference" - people who had an impact on our last half-century. Some of the choices were obvious - FDR and Eleanor. The sexual revolution was given special attention, in the persons of Dr. Rock, who invented the pill, and Alfred Kinsey, who - some think - made that invention necessary.

Other choices could be challenged. Katharine Hepburn was the only actor on the list - though Marilyn Monroe and John Wayne were larger legendary influences. LBJ was on the list, though his war was started by Kennedy and extended by Nixon. Edward Murrow was hailed for opposing Joe McCarthy - and McCarthy was the greater threat. Reinhold Niebuhr is called the great preacher of liberalism, though Walter Lippmann reached a larger audience of liberals, and Billy Graham was more important in the history of American religion. Jack Kerouac has not changed our sensibilities as much as Norman Mailer did. Jacqueline Onassis has filled the tabloids, not our history. Dale Carnegie spread more uplift than Abraham Maslow.

But most of the choices, even the relatively obscure ones, seemed right: Alfred Barr for the Museum of Modern Art, William Levitt for his Levittowns, Ray Kroc for his Big Macs, Thomas Watson for IBM, Robert Noyce for the microchip.

It was disheartening to see how few women were chosen - six out of the 53 people named (one entry was double, another triple). And two of those women chosen were questionable, Hepburn and Onassis. Babe Didrikson Zaharias deserved to be recognized as the greatest athlete America ever produced. Rosa Parks started the civil rights landslide. Diane Arbus or Georgia O'Keeffe deserved a place.

And more than three women should have been written about the 53 subjects.

There are even fewer blacks than women on the list - five of them; and only one black writer joined the celebrating. Louis Armstrong belonged in this group; Toni Morrison and James Baldwin should have been among the writers - but I believe they were approached.

Yet we must also recognize that women and blacks had less impact than they should have, over the last half-century, because they were not allowed to play their proper role.

Those on the list - Dr. King and Jackie Robinson, Eleanor Roosevelt and Betty Friedan - had to work against great resistance, and even threats. The comforting thing about this list is that no one looking at it can imagine a similar catalog, drawn up 50 years from now, that will lack heavy black and female representation. That is one of the best outcomes of the 50 years just ended. They got us here - that is, to the beginning.

Guild endorsement angers members

by Art Buchwald

The Newspaper Guild has endorsed Fritz Mondale as its presidential candidate. Actually, the leaders of the Newspaper Guild endorsed him - the membership was not consulted. Many members of the guild are very angry that their leaders took a position in the presidential campaign.

I thought there would be jubilation in the Mondale camp when the Newspaper Guild gave the nod to their man. But it was just the opposite.

"This is an absolute disaster," said one of Mondale's people. "We've been blindsided."

"How can you say that? The Newspaper Guild is a powerful union and its members control much of the news fit to print. You should be thrilled they came out for your boy so early."

"The members didn't come out for our boy - the guild officers came out for him, and the rank and file are mad as hell. Do you know what is going to happen? The members will clobber Mondale just to prove they haven't gone in the tank."

"I didn't think of that. You don't believe they would purposely slant their stories against him, just to assert their independence?"

"They could do something worse - ignore him. And if they do write about him they'll be harder on Mondale than anybody else. If they are not, their editors will think they're following the Newspaper Guild party line."

"I think you're right," I said. "I frankly don't believe a Newspaper Guild should support any presidential candidate. After all, what can a president do for the press, anyway? The worst candidates have given us our best stories, and the best ones haven't given us any stories at all. Why do you think the guild officers stuck their necks out?"

The Mondale man said, "We suspect someone from the other side was behind it."

"When you say the other side are you talking about Mondale's Democratic rivals or the Republicans?"

"In a presidential primary everybody is on the other side."

"Perhaps you're overreacting." The Mondale aide said, "The last time the Newspaper Guild supported a presidential candidate was in 1972 when they came out for McGovern. Look what happened to him."

"I forgot McGovern. Funny enough after they endorsed him, McGovern complained he never got a decent story in the papers again."

"It isn't funny. The same thing could happen to Mondale."

"I guess your best bet would be to repudiate the guild endorsement. After all, you don't have to take every political blessing that comes along."

"It may be too late. We should have turned it down when it was first offered to us. Now it's going to be hard to get the rank-and-file guild members to stop leaning over backwards to show they don't support Fritz."

"I notice where many guild members have already notified their leaders that they don't support Mondale. Isn't this a good sign?" I asked.

"Yeah, but those reporters will go even farther out of their way to show they mean it. No matter which way they go now, it's a no-win situation for us."

"There must be some way you can get a fair shake from the newspaper people, in spite of the fact they endorsed you."

"Any ideas?"

"How about this one? Why doesn't Mondale announce 'If I am elected president, I will let the press go to Grenada?'"

Army helicopter disturbs students' daily routine

The presence of an Army helicopter on campus Wednesday raises some disturbing questions.

Throughout the morning and early afternoon, students walking to and from classes could not help but notice the UH1H copter circling the campus and periodically landing on the lawn in front of the Education Building. While many were enthralled by the unexpected display of high technology, none seemed to consider the implications of its being there. This reflects no credit on the University population.

According to U.S. Army Captain John Cogley, assistant professor of military science, the helicopter carried members of the 101st Air Assault Division, stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky., who were here to give a rappelling demonstration. Cogley added that the exercise was coordinated by the local detachment of the ROTC and the local Army recruiter. This being the case, it is obvious that the demonstration was a recruiting exercise aimed directly at University students.

Why was this fact not previously impressed upon the student body, and why was the exercise not scheduled in such a way as to allow interested students to attend without disrupting the academic routine of the campus as a whole? Would it not be more closely at events that take place on campus, assessing them not only in terms of their outward appearance but with an awareness of the organizer's possible underlying intentions. There is nothing at all to be lost by this questioning of motives, and a definite risk accompanies any incidence of blind acceptance. The responsibility to resist covert manipulation ultimately rests with the individual, and the collective exercise of this resistance cannot help but reaffirm the integrity of the student body.

Helicopter exercises disregard school, safety

On Wednesday, I, like many others, was fascinated by the appearance of an armed services helicopter over campus. My fascination was momentary, however, when I realized that this helicopter was continually landing and taking off in a small area ringed by observers in the midst of a busy campus. That the organizers of this exercise should so blatantly disregard the safety of those on the ground and discourteously cause classes to be interrupted by the incessant noise appalled me.

While I do not deny the necessity for ROTC students to engage in such training, I trust that future such exercises will be confined to areas which do not endanger or disrupt the campus.

Photographer treated rudely by Pres. Olscamp

As one of the classified staff members present at the Wednesday, November 3, brown bag luncheon, I feel that President Olscamp's actions and comments toward William Brown were not only rude and tactless but demanding of an immediate public apology to Mr. Brown and the classified staff that were present. Mr. Brown's performance of his job as photographer was not as distracting as were President Olscamp's manner and my reaction to his comments and actions.

Thank you.

'The Well' provides services for healthy lifestyles

by Lesley Sprigg
reporter

Promoting a healthy lifestyle for students by providing information, programs, and referrals is the aim of the Student Wellness Center, commonly known as "The Well."

Located on the second floor of the Student Health Service, The Well can be used as a resource on topics varying from nutrition to roommate problems.

"We deal mostly with the physical and emotional aspects of wellness, such as sexual awareness or stress. Generally, the most asked for information is on weight control and nutrition," Theresa Popp Braun, coordinator of The Well said.

The concept of wellness, Popp Braun said, includes six dimensions: physical, emotional, social, intellectual, occupational, and spiritual. The Well gives out information on all these different aspects, she added.

The Well employs 30 undergraduate volunteers, called peer advisers, who receive academic credit for their time and effort.

"Peer advisers don't counsel people, we only make referrals. We talk to students and assess what service they may need and where we can send them," Laura McKinley, peer adviser for The Well said.

IN ADDITION to three or four hours a week spent at The Well giving out information and making referrals, the peer advisers are broken into teams that deal with specific areas of wellness, such as physical fitness or sexual awareness. The teams are responsible for presenting programs or workshops on their given area.

Present advisers applied near the end of last spring semester, were interviewed, and went through brief training. Students wanting to be advisers next year will be applying much earlier, and once chosen, will have an added requirement.

Advisers selected for next fall will be required to take a one credit course this spring before working at The Well. The course, College Student Personnel 482, which includes a brief study of health and wellness along with listening and questioning skills, will be added to the advisers' schedules.

Applications for peer advisers are being taken and are due today at 4 p.m. There are a limited number of applications available and 50 students will be chosen to interview for the positions.

"Presently, the peer advisers are working on programs to go to residence halls and to meetings of clubs and groups," Popp Braun said. In the planning stages are a birth control information program that will take place in the residence halls, and a stress program related to undecided majors.

A "Wellness Awareness" program is being developed and should be presented early next semester. "A stress program dealing with roommate problems is currently on the back burner," Popp Braun said.

Woman assaulted near Tech. building

A University woman was assaulted Wednesday at 10 p.m. near the Industrial Education Technology building and the Greenhouse, police reports said.

The victim reported that as she was leaving the Union, a man yelled, "Hey, don't call out or you'll be sorry."

He grabbed her, bent her arm in an armlock and walked her from the outside of the Union to an area by the IET building and greenhouse, where he knocked her to the ground, struck her, then fled the scene, according to Dean Gerkens, associate director of Public Safety.

She suffered no injuries except a bruise on the side of her face, Gerkens said.

She described her assailant as 5 feet, 10 inches, black, wearing faded blue jeans, a blue jean jacket and black tennis shoes, but could give no further clues to identification.

Young widow grieves

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) - The 17-year-old Lebanese widow of Navy Medical Corpsman Bryan Earle wept at his gravesite and kissed his casket yesterday following a funeral attended by about 150 of Earle's friends and relatives.

Earle was one of 239 American servicemen killed in the Oct. 23 terrorist bombing of Marine headquarters in Beirut.

Just a week before the explosion, the 21-year-old Earle, of Painesville, married Mishleen Abi Ghannem, who had worked as a translator for him in Lebanon.

"He never deserved to die," Mishleen cried out as the Navy ceremony at Riverside Cemetery ended. "I will pray every day and every minute. All of them deserved to stay forever in this world."

Mishleen, dressed in black, was escorted at the cemetery and at an earlier Navy ceremony at Brunner-Nixon Funeral Home by her brother, Walid, 23, who had accompanied her to Cleveland.

UNTIL MISHLEEN spoke at the cemetery, no mention was made of the violent nature of Earle's death.

Capt. James Johnston, a Navy chaplain, directed the services.

"There are several things we share," he said. "One of them is grief. One of them is joy. Our grief is honest, but this grief must move into joy. Bryan in every way today is whole."

A funeral procession of about 60 cars traveled just over a mile from the funeral home to the cemetery for the brief graveside ceremony, after which a contingent of four Marines fired the traditional three rifle volleys and a bugler played "Taps."

Mishleen had said Tuesday that she and Bryan were married in a Catholic church in west Beirut on Oct. 16. She said she met Earle a year earlier, when he was treating a neighbor of her family.

"After that, the days together were everything in my life, everything I lived for," she said.

Because most military records were destroyed in the bombing, the marriage was not immediately confirmed. However, military spokesmen say a chaplain and servicemen who attended the marriage ceremony have signed statements testifying that it occurred.

Not prepared for parenthood

Teen-age pregnancies troublesome

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Noting that more than 1,800 Franklin County women between the ages of 15 and 19 had babies in 1982, participants in a program sponsored by the Columbus Alliance of Black School Educators said the number of teenage pregnancies probably will be greater this year.

Ora White, a counselor at Brookhaven High School, said young mothers' schooling usually suffers because of approaching parenthood.

Dr. Martha Miller, a Columbus pediatrician, said teen-age mothers often aren't physically equipped for the demands of pregnancy.

"The prime age for childbearing is 21 to 30. Before that, the body systems aren't mature enough to handle it," she said.

Miller also said young mothers frequently have children who have more problems in school, are less developed emotionally and intellectually and are below average in height and weight.

YOUNG MOTHERS may inflict more physical and emotional abuse on their children and may neglect them because they can't handle the stress of parenthood, she said.

"Nationally, four out of 10 teen-agers get pregnant. Two out of 10 have live births, and more than half of the teen-age pregnancies end in induced or spontaneous abortions (miscarriages)," Bessie Jackson, director of the Bethune Center in Columbus said.

"In Washington, D.C., they speak of Florida, Mississippi and Ohio as having a crisis. Seventy-five percent of all teen-agers are sexually active, and one of every three girls is sexually active."

"In terms of Columbus, where we have high-risk clinics, there has still been a rise in infant mortality and an increase in birth defects, particularly mental retardation, because more teens are getting pregnant."

Jackson said many teen-agers don't seek prenatal care because of their ignorance of its importance or because of the expense.

"In Columbus, prenatal care for a normal pregnancy with a three-day hospital stay costs $2,500. The doctors here are turning their backs on the young people because the (youngsters) can't pay the fees, and the mothers then have to go to a clinic where they face a long waiting list."

Reagan seeks aid in shrinking deficit

TOKYO (AP) - President Reagan, making no apparent headway in his bid to expand American access to Japanese markets, appealed directly to Japan's legislators today for help in shrinking the huge U.S. trade deficit giving him political headaches back home.

In a prepared speech, the first by an American president before the Diet, the Japanese parliament, Reagan said, "We need your help in demonstrating free trade to address concerns of my own people." The president told the lawmakers that "Americans believe your markets are less open than ours. We need your support to lower further the barriers that still make it difficult for many American products to enter your markets easily."

While strongly castigating the Soviet government, Reagan promised that the United States would never abandon arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union.

"OUR GREAT frustration has been the other side's unwillingness to negotiate in good faith. We wanted to cut deep into nuclear arsenals and still do. But they are blocking the dramatic reductions the world wants," the president said.

In urging a lowering of trade barriers, Reagan denounced legislation passed by the House last week over his objections that would attempt to curb Japanese auto imports by mandating inclusion of a percentage of U.S.-manufactured parts.

"This would be a cruel hoax, raising prices without protecting jobs," Reagan said. "We would buy less from you. You would buy less from us."

The Falcon offensive line; it's just one big happy family

by Tom Hisek
sports editor

Offensive linemen aren't in the spotlight too often, and when the opportunity does come along they are more than willing to reap in the praises for a good job that often goes unnoticed.

The accompanying photograph was supposed to picture only Bowling Green's five starting offensive linemen. But, when Scott Duncan, BG's offensive line coach called the line together for the snapshot - the starting offensive line suddenly ballooned to 12 first-stringers.

Whether all the pictured individuals are even offensive players is not the point, but it only demonstrates the fact that an offensive lineman certainly doesn't lead the glorified life of a star quarterback or running back.

BUT the fact remains that the Falcon offensive line has come a long way since 1983's opening game against Fresno State, when quarterback Brian McClure's rushing statistics showed a big, fat minus 59 yards rushing, while BG's ground game could muster only 28 yards.

Last week, in the Falcons' 45-30 victory over

Ball State, McClure was never even sacked, while Darryl Story and Lamont Wagner managed to gain 238 yards in what was probably the line's best showing this season.

In tomorrow's game pitting the Falcons against the option-happy offense of the Ohio University Bobcats in Athens at 1:30 p.m., BG's offensive five will be looking to give McClure the time to spot the open man, against the Mid-American Conference's top-rated pass defense, yielding an average of only 121 yards per game.

McClure, with 2,856 yards passing entering tomorrow's contest, will be attempting to become the first quarterback in MAC history to gain more than 3,000 yards passing in a season.

But, what makes the line's accomplishments stand out, is that its progress has been attained with anything but a steady starting lineup.

WHEN the season opened, Dean Hall and Eric Barnard were at the tackles, while Mark White and Dan Schriener were at the guard positions, with Brian Johnson at the center spot.

Since that time, White has quit playing football; Hall is probably out for the season after suffering a knee injury two weeks ago; Barnard has gone from tackle to his natural position at guard and now back to tackle in the wake of Hall's injury; which in turn, brought Mike Estep into the picture at the right guard position last week. And Vic Cales has been at the right tackle spot since early this season. Only Johnson and Schriener have maintained their incumbency.

There are no standout performers among them. Instead, they have relied on a strong sense of unity and just going out and playing the game as it was meant to be played.

As BG head coach Denny Stolz said, "They're not great athletes, but they're all competitive. Like I always tell them, they're such poor athletes, they couldn't play anywhere else," he said with a grin.

"You have to realize that the offensive line is different from the rest of the team," the 6-foot-5, 280-pound Cales said. "We're a pretty-much poised group. At our position, you just can't go wild, you have to be in a certain state of mind. You have to demonstrate some controlled aggression."

THE LINE has come a long way since the days of pre-season practice when Stolz said the offensive line was still a puzzle. "We're moving players around, trying to get the best combination," Stolz said in August. "It's still an unsettled area."

Former Falcon lineman Greg King had complicated matters for Stolz by not responding well after knee surgery; Ray Rockwell, the projected starting center, suffered a sidelining knee injury and then White quit the team this season.

"Although they didn't start last year, Dean (Hall) and Brian (Johnson) were our only established players coming into this season," Stolz said. "But now, other than Barnard, they'll all be back next year, and not just for next year, but for a couple of years."

Duncan, the line's tutor, was proud of their accomplishments, but still said they have a long way to go. But, he couldn't deny the fact they had come a long way as a unit. "During spring ball, it was even tough for the quarterback to get a pass off - playing against the second-team defense."

Cales and Barnard said communication was the key to the team's success on the field; communication in terms of picking up an opponent's blitz, making a key block or just sorting out blocking assignments.

"It's like a boyfriend-girlfriend relationship," Barnard said. "You have to have communication - you have to have complete communication."

EVEN THOUGH they aren't a group that takes a particularly serious outlook towards football during practice and most other times, they do get the job done on Saturday afternoons.

Barnard has even established a secret fraternity among the team's offensive linemen. Called the JFS club (Just Forget About Sacks); it is a fraternal organization devoted to improving the team's morale; though its methods must remain a secret.

For the moment though, Duncan is just concerned with maintaining the modesty of his talented group. Cales said the photograph of the squad should have been taken on the golf course hill - on one of their more-than-frequent runs up-and-down BG's only hill. "They're a fun group to coach," Duncan said. "I'm just worried that with all these interviews and stuff, they might start thinking they are good."

Green Sheet

Vol. XVI, No. 7

Bowling Green State University

November 11, 1983

Dayton Ballet promises to leave you stage struck

Dayton Ballet, one of America's top regional ballet companies, will present its full-length work "Stage Struck, the Fable of Ballet," at 7:30 p.m. Sunday (Nov. 20) in Kobacker Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center. The performance is free and open to the public.

Created by Stuart Sebastian, director and choreographer for the company, "Stage Struck" is a heartwarming tribute to all ballet dancers who yearn for fame and perfection.

The show opens as a young dancer steps into the spotlight and hears the strains of Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake." Typical of any stage struck youngster, she dreams of dancing the White Swan, Odette, in the famous Russian ballet.

The first act features the discipline of ballet class, strenuous rehearsals, and a Romeo and Juliet setting with brightly colored costumes.

The second act, in the style of a 19th century story ballet, introduces the tale of Shakespeare's popular romantic comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The climax of the ballet arrives at the moment when the young dancer replaces the prima ballerina on stage and the toe shoes and dreams are passed on to a new generation of stage struck youth.

Green Sheet is published by the Bowling Green State University Office of Public Relations for students, faculty and staff. It is produced in cooperation with The BG News.

The next issue of Green Sheet will be published Dec. 2 and will cover events occurring between Dec. 1 and the end of the semester. The deadline to submit information for that issue is noon Wednesday, Nov. 30.

All events must be submitted in writing to the Green Sheet editor, 806 Administration Building. In the event of space limitations, those events submitted at the earliest date will be given preference. There is no charge to have an item listed.

Junior Steve Cotten is feature editor; senior Radell Roberts is serving as calendar editor.

Festival Series presents:

'The poet of the keyboard'

Internationally acclaimed pianist Murray Perahia, who critics have dubbed the "poet of the keyboard," will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday (Nov. 17) in Kobacker Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center.

Tickets for the performance, which is the second concert in this year's Festival Series, are $7 and $5 for University students and senior citizens, and $9 and $7 for others. They may be purchased from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. weekdays at the box office in the Moore Musical Arts Center or reserved by calling the 24-hour ticket hotline at (419) 372-0171.

Tickets for remaining concerts in the Festival Series, including Perahia's performance, an appearance by the New World String quartet on Feb. 13 and a concert by the Philip Jones Brass Ensemble on April 11, are priced at $18 and $13 for students and $23 and $18 for others.

Perahia, who has been called "one of the most extravagantly talented musicians of our time," will perform works by Beethoven, Chopin, Mendelssohn and Schubert.

From 10-11 a.m. on Friday (Nov. 18) he will also be giving a master class in Bryan Recital Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center. The class is free and open to the public.

A graduate of Mannes College of Music in Manhattan, Perahia made his Carnegie Hall debut in 1968. Four years later, at the age of 25, he received world-wide attention as the first American to win the Leeds International Piano Competition in London.

He has since appeared in the major music capitals of the United States, Europe, Israel, and Japan as well as recorded for CBS Masterworks.

Faculty art on display

A wide array of artwork -- ranging from paintings and drawings to sculpture, metals and fibers -- by University School of Art faculty members will be on display beginning Sunday (Nov. 13) in the Fine Arts Gallery.

The exhibition will continue through Sunday (Dec. 4).

The exhibit and reception are free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 2-5 p.m. on Sunday. The gallery will be closed from Nov. 23-27 during the University's Thanksgiving recess.

African Extravaganza features films, dances

"African Extravaganza" is the title for two days of programs sponsored by the African Peoples Association on Friday and Saturday (Nov. 18-19).

The programming will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday with the presentation of the film, "You've Struck A Rock," in the Northeast Commons.

Then on Saturday, the Sandusky dance group "S.A.B.O.T." will present "Memories of Yesterday Turn Hopes of Today into a Better Tomorrow" at 3:30 p.m. in the Northeast Commons. Following the performance, a lecture by Edmund Chipamunga, the Zimbabwe Ambassador to the United States, will begin at 4:30 p.m.

All of the programs are free and open to the public.

Karate classes forming

It's a method of self-defense. It's an art form. It's one of the fastest growing sports in this country.

It's karate. And non-credit courses are now forming.

Taught by American Karate System and American Karate Association black belts, the classes are open to all. Sessions will be held from 6-7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the St. Thomas More University Church beginning Tuesday (Nov. 15).

Registrations are now being accepted at the Office of Continuing Education, 300 McFall Center. There is a $20 registration fee. The class also doubles as a club for competition purposes.

FMA plans fall fashion fair

"Fashion Street" is the theme of the Fashion Merchandising Association's annual fall fashion show to be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday (Nov. 16) in the Northeast Commons. The event is free and open to all.

How to mix and match clothes that you own with new or used clothing will be emphasized throughout the show.

Twenty University students will model the vintage and contemporary clothing in front of backdrops designed to have a "street scene" appearance. The models will demonstrate how to achieve the "campus look" without paying a high price.

Several students will be modeling their own fashions with the remainder of the clothing being furnished by Lifestyle Surplus, 904 E. Wooster; Fashion Bug, 1129 S. Main; Winkelman's in Toledo and the New-to-You shop in Perrysburg.

UAO Presents:

'Sgt. Dietrich' in concert

Comedian Steve Landesberg, better known as the erudite detective Arthur Dietrich on the Emmy-Award-winning television series "Barney Miller," will perform at 8 p.m. Sunday (Dec. 4) in the Grand Ballroom of the Union.

Tickets, priced at $5, are now on sale at the Union Ticket Office on the first floor. Hours for the ticket office are 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. All seats are reserved.

The opening act will be Cleveland musician and comedian Charlie Wiener. A frequent and popular performer on the Bowling Green campus, Wiener has recorded two albums: "Twelve Inches of Wiener" and "Dancin' At The Wienerland Ball."

Landesberg, who received three Emmy nominations for his portrayal of the zany Dietrich during his six-year-run on "Barney Miller," is in the midst of a nationwide collegiate tour which will eventually take him to more than 50 colleges and universities.

Landesberg stepped onto the stage for the first time while doing a show with his National Guard unit in New York.

The positive reinforcement he received from his buddies encouraged him to try working in some small clubs in Greenwich Village and at the improvisation with other young comics such as David Brenner and Jimmie Walker.

He soon joined an improvisational comedy group called The New York Stickball Team and spent a year-and-a-half with them while appearing at such diverse places as college campuses, television talk shows and the unemployment line.

After the group broke up, Landesberg continued to perfect his style and in December of 1971, he made his first appearance on "The Johnny Carson Show."

That appearance paved the way for other television guest shots and acting assignments.

In 1974, he landed the role as the Viennese violinist on the Paul Sand Show, "Friends and Lovers." Although the show lasted only one season, it was long enough to catch the eye of Danny Arnold, the creator of "Barney Miller."

Since "Barney Miller," he has had a number of television appearances, including the hosting of his own network special, "The Steve Landesberg Television Show."

The concert is being sponsored by the University Activities Organization.

Liqueur making workshop

Homemade liqueurs will be sampled and the technique for making them demonstrated from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesday (Nov. 30) in the Alumni Room on the third floor of the Union.

The liqueur making workshop is being sponsored by the Union Activities Organization and is open to all who are 21 or over. Registration will begin Nov. 28 in the UAO office on the third floor of the Union. A registration fee of $5 will be due upon sign-up.

Ralph Gilespe, bartender at College Station, 1616 E. Wooster, will demonstrate how to make Kahlua, Amaretto and many other liqueurs that can be used during the holiday season.

Steamboat for Christmas

A week of snow and skiing in Steamboat, Colo., is being offered to students Jan. 9-16 by the Union Activities Organization.

The trip, co-sponsored by the school of HPER, features five days and six nights in a 700-acre resort area during what is normally the time of year known as "college days."

Accommodations, furnished by Echo Travel, include round trip transportation by motor coach. The buses will leave the campus on Monday (Jan. 9) and return on Monday (Jan. 16).

Reservations for all travelers will be made at the Timber Run condominium complex located less than five minutes from the ski lifts. The units feature an outdoor heated pool, outdoor hot tubs, and a recreation building with sauna facilities.

The cost of the entire trip package for any University student is $270. For non-students who do not desire transportation, the cost is $169. Sign-ups can be made in the UAO office in the Union.

Steamboat is well known as the ski area with a cowboy atmosphere. Centered in a vast cattle raising district, it boasts more genuine western hospitality than any other Colorado resort.

For the first two weeks of January every year thousands of college students from across the nation retreat to this resort to enjoy the skiing and social activities. Located at the base of Mt. Werner, the second longest vertical drop in the state, Steamboat enjoys some of the best skiing trails and snow conditions available.

In addition to providing transportation and condominium accommodations, Echo Travel will also be sponsoring a schedule of parties and activities including hot tub happy hours and a ski race, free for all travelers. Ski equipment rental at $6.50 per day and ski lessons for beginning to advance skiers will also be offered.

Local talent night

The talents of 10 University students will be featured at 8 p.m. Friday (Nov. 11) in the Community Suite of the Union as UAO presents "Local Talent Night."

The evening of entertainment is open to all with an admission price of $1.

A wide variety of talent -- ranging from song and dance to instrumentalists -- will be offered. Students performing include Kelly Broadway, David Shaffer, John Lariviere, Gloria Porco, Donnel Nobel, Rayme Marcozzi, Cinde Belfiore, Terry Cummings, Keith Kelly and Nancy Wilch.

Cabaret director needed

Applications to be the UAO Cabaret Director are now available in the UAO office located on the third floor of the Union.

Any University student with a background or interest in music and dance may apply for the position. The application deadline is 5 p.m. Friday (Nov. 18).

The cabaret performances are scheduled for Feb. 1-3 at a time and place yet to be announced. The selected director of this variety talent show will be responsible for the selection of all music and choreography as well as auditions and casting.

Christmas crafts fair

The annual UAO Christmas Crafts Fair will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Nov. 30 through Dec. 2 in the Promenade Lounge on the second floor of the Union.

Area merchants as well as individual craftsmen will be on hand with a wide array of seasonal merchandise. Items to be offered include Christmas ornaments, old-fashioned candies, wreaths, ceramic figures, pine-cone trees, plants and decorative wall-hangings.

Welcome to Friday.

This week, we've gathered ideas on places to go within an hour or so of the University. All of the places are free or inexpensive to enter and all contain exhibits or other attractions that have proved to be extremely popular to area residents.

The staff of Friday would like to extend their thanks to the journalism 404 class for compiling the contents of this issue. We would also like to remind all readers that there are only a few Fridays left for which to submit original entertainment and leisure works for publication. We will also except reviews, personality profiles on interesting people and humorous essays.

Enjoy your weekend and, always, have a terrific Friday

Tourist Town Retains Small Town Character

by David Moodie

Situated on the south bank of the Maumee River in Northwest Ohio, Grand Rapids appears to be like any other rural community. The main street, lined with its many small shops, is practically empty, except for a delivery truck parked outside of one of the town's two grocery stores.

In a few hours, however, the scene changes and the empty street becomes lined with cars, and the shops are filled with patrons, some of who file off busses from Cleveland and Detroit.

To the outsider, this scene may appear odd, but to the residents and business people of Grand Rapids, it marks another typical day for a town that is enjoying a rebirth.

"We used to drive through and there was nothing," recalled Janet Torkelson, one of the town's four antique dealers and owner of Antique Alley. Janet, who lives down the river in Waterville, explained one reason for the town's rebirth: "We're putting in businesses to complement one another and to draw people in."

"IT WORKS well because the townspeople work together," she said proudly.

Kathleen Castanza, owner of Shades of Distinction, also expressed her pride in the town and its people. "The people are phenomenal," she said. "I just can't say enough about Grand Rapids."

Shades of Distinction, which specializes in lamp shades that are sculptured and hand-painted by Castanza, is located in a renovated mill.

The other shops, which give Grand Rapids its unique flavor are also in buildings that were renovated.

One shop that has not changed much over the years is the Rapids Pharmacy. The building was built in 1896 as a drug store according to Joe Boyle, the store's owner. Joe is starting a museum in the back of the store depicting the pharmaceutical business as it was almost 100 years ago. Joe started the project about four or five months ago and is using items which have been found inside the store.

Like other residents and merchants, Boyle is quite proud of Grand Rapids. One reason he likes the town is because of its location. "There are not too many places in Northwest Ohio with this natural beauty that have been developed," he said.

HIS OTHER reason for liking the town is the people, he said.

"The people are super. Good, solid people and not too many phonies."

Perhaps the most popular establishment in Grand Rapids is La Roe's Restaurant. The restaurant, owned and restored by David La Roe, has three main sections. A restaurant and tavern occupy the ground floor. On the wall behind the bar hangs a plaque reading, "from wine sudden friendships spring. The upstairs section of the bar houses banquet facilities and during the month of December it is the home of Girty's Backstage Dinner Theater. The theater, which uses talent from the University and area theater groups, will present a variety show with a Christmas theme this year.

Grand Rapids' shops are not the town's only points of interest. Between the town and the river is an old canal lock which runs the length of the town and down to the Grand Rapids dam and Mary Jane Thurston State Park. A wooded hiking trail runs along the canal.

Another point of interest is the Bluebird, an excursion steam train which runs between Grand Rapids and Waterville. The Bluebird runs from June 1 through Oct. 31.

Across the river from the town is the Isaac Ludwig Mill, a working water-powered mill and museum. The Shawnee Princess, an excursion steamboat, is also docked on the north bank of the Maumee in Providence Metro Park.

With all there is to see and do, the 20 minute drive from Bowling Green is well worth it year-round. With its many shops and points of interest, Grand Rapids is a tourist town, true, but one that has retained its small town character.

Lake Erie Isle A Different But Close Get Away

Story By David Moodie

Recreation and history have always characterized the Great Lakes region and Put-In-Bay, on South Bass Island, is rich in both. Every summer thousands of tourists visit the island, which is just three miles off the Ohio mainland, and see its many attractions dominated by Perry's Victory and International Peace Memorial.

Perry's Monument, built between 1912 and 1914, commemorates Oliver Hazard Perry's key naval victory over the British in the Battle of Lake Erie during the War of 1812 and the lasting peace between the United States and Canada. The 352 feet tall Greek Doric column is the largest structure of its type in the world and the third tallest monument in the United States.

Inside the rotunda at the base of the monument, visitors may read the names of the Americans killed or wounded during the battle. A brief walk upstairs takes you to the elevator level where a full roster of American fleet is engraved in the walls.

The elevator then takes you to the observation deck at the top of the monument where you will enjoy a breathtaking view of the surrounding islands. On exceptionally clear days, you will be able to see the Canadian mainland on the horizon.

A TAPED history of the battle is also played for those who want to know more about the history of the area.

The National Park Service, which maintains the monument, has a small information center by the monument which houses a scale replica of Perry's flagship, the Laurence, and artifacts from the War of 1812.

The center of Put-In-Bay is only a short stroll from Perry's Monument. Here you may admire the hundreds of boats docked in the bay, rent or launch your own boat and enjoy a day of fishing or other water sports on the lake.

If you are a land-lubber, Put-In-Bay has a lot to offer you. You can enjoy a leisurely stroll through the village park, under a white framed gazebo, or by a bubbling fountain.

Put-In-Bay has dozens of gift and specialty shops, which surround the park. You may browse through the many giftshops, which include Bay Fudge Emporium, which sells freshly baked candies along with gifts. The Carriage House and Country House takes you back to days of the past.

Amid the numerous stores and restaurants stands the Park Hotel, a quaint reminder of the island's glory years as a resort area in the early 1900s.

FOR THE antique- and sea-loving collector Put-In-Bay has the perfect shop. The Cargo Net holds numerous treasures of the sea including the engine order telegraph from the Amsterdam, valued at $3,200.

You can view the shipping history of the Erie islands at the Blacksmith shop and Put-In-Bay Museum, located on the southwest side of the village. The shop features gifts and the history of not only South Bass but also Mille and North Bass Islands.

After your visit to the village, there are numerous sites to take in on the western side of the island.

Just down the road from the village is Perry's Cave and across the road from it is the Heineman Winery and Crystal Cave.

Discovery of Perry's Cave is credited to Commodore Perry. According to legend, he used the cave to store supplies and later to keep British prisoners. The cave also has an underground well which rises and falls with the lake's level.

CRYSTAL CAVE was discovered in the late 1800s while a well was being drilled for the winery. The cave is actually the world's largest geod, a hollow rock with a crystal lining, and measures approximately 30 feet in diameter. It is the only cave of its type on the island.

Heineman winery is the only operating winery left on the island. Between Memorial Day and Labor Day combined tours of Crystal Cave and the winery are available. Afterwards you can sample Heineman's wines and cheeses in the wine garden.

Between the caves and the state park on the western tip of the island is a replica of a viking long house. Here you can view various examples of metal work, watch Scottish Highland cattle with their long, bright red hair or sample island made maple syrup.

To get to Put-In-Bay, take one of the two ferry lines that service it. Parker Boat Line operates out of Port Clinton and takes you on a mini-cruise around the western tip of the island and drops you off in the village. Miller Boat Line runs off Catawba Point and docks on the southwest side of the island, where a bus or taxi will run you into town.

No matter what your interests are, South Bass Island and Put-In-Bay have something to offer you in one day or a vacation get-away.

Lions And Tigers And Bears Found In Toledo ZOO

by Michelle Maulorico

Croaking black ravens, racing sea lions and black bear cubs live in a special place among the expanding metropolitan city of Toledo. These and other animals bring smiles to the faces of visitors of the Toledo Zoo.

Walking through a tunnel under Broadway street, a passage leading from the zoo's parking lot to the zoo, an escape from reality begins. If only for a few hours, one can forget about school, politics or social problems and watch the carefree animals.

A black raven greets visitors as they enter the zoo and seems a bit unfriendly. He croaks a warning, as though auditioning for a Vincent Price movie, rather than welcoming guests.

The sound of swans and ducks gracefully swimming in their pool can be heard, as well as children giggling and cameras clicking as visitors walk toward the polar bears.

The American black bears, next to their polar bear friends, pace as if they are expectant fathers. While the two are busy walking, a seven-month-old cub runs around, totally oblivious to his companions. He seems to be showing off for his audience.

WHILE THE cub is new to the area, his neighbor is an old-timer. The female European brown bear has raised 11 litters in the past 16 years. Such brown bears are often seen in circuses.

Just past the bear exhibit, a crowd of people looks down at something. At the same time one can smell the undeniable aroma of fresh water.

Looking down into the water, sea lions can be seen swimming in their small quarter. Appointments, meetings or classes aren't on their daily agenda, but racing is. The two lions race around their pool at excessive speeds and spectators' heads move from side to side as they watch. After a few laps, the race is over.

The Toledo Zoo houses hundreds of Toledo's most unique citizens. Of special appeal to many is the primate complex that is home for Max, the gigantic gorilla, among other species of primates.

The zoo is compactly built so if walking a great distance is a worry, there is no need to fret. Snack bars and souvenir stands are available and benches for resting the feet are scattered throughout the park.

Small children point to giraffes and zebras in the distance. The children seem astonished by the giraffe's long neck as he bellows above the tree tops.

ONE CAN continue touring the recently remodeled zoo and take a break from the hot sun by stepping inside the home of the carnivores. The Bengal tiger sits alone in his cage and stares out as spectators stare in. He looks warm, uncomfortable and bored, but to visitors, he is fascinating and delightful. Next door neighbor to the bengal is the king of the jungle, the lion.

Down several paths await exhibits of primates and prairie dogs, of camels and caribou and of bison and bengals. In a special part of the zoo is a wonderland for children. Once called Children's Wonderland, the children's zoo may fulfill the dreams of youngsters and the childish impulses of adults.

Shetland ponies, cows, sheep, goats, rabbits and a work horse are just a few of the animals to pet.

Walking back to the tunnel that leads under the Anthony Wayne trail, you may wonder what to do next. Perhaps you could depart the animal park from the rear exit and walk across the street to Walbridge park on the Maumee River. Whatever you decide, you'll probably not soon forget the day you spent with Toledo's most unique citizens.

Roomie Must Decide To Ski Or Not To Ski

by Gena Gallagher

Last weekend I was sitting in a patch of sunlight on the floor, sipping some Pepsi when my roommate burst in from an afternoon of jogging at the Rec Center and announced "Hey, when the first snow comes what do you say we go skiing at some place around here?"

"Skiing?" I sputtered, knocking my glass of Pepsi onto the carpet.

"Yeah, what's the matter? Don't you like skiing?... Oh, you slob," she said.

"Where are the paper towels?"

"Never mind the paper towels," I said.

"What's this about skiing? Look, the leaves aren't even off the trees yet and the Huntington Bank guy says it's only 48 degrees. How can you even be thinking about skiing?"

My roommate tossed some Bounties on me and pulled off her terry cloth headband and kicked off her Nikes. "I lo-o-o-ve winter sports."

"E-gad," I said. "I was afraid you'd say that."

"Why?"

"BECAUSE IF there's one thing I hate, it's winter sports. Maybe we should find separate roommates."

"You hate winter sports?!" She started waving her arms. "But they're great. Skiing, that's the greatest sport there is."

"Is not."

"How do you know? Have you even tried it?"

"Yes."

It was a total lie, really. The closest I'd ever come to skiing was signing the casts of about half a dozen friends who'd been foolish enough to actually try the sport themselves. That was enough for me.

"So what'd you think?" my friend said.

"Oh, um, didn't like it. I've got, uh, bad ankles."

"Well what about sledding, or tobogganing?"

"Sledding? Tobogganing? In Bowling Green?! Ha, Ha. Be serious. You couldn't get enough momentum on Mount Jerome to pass a snail, even if it was going the other way. You'd be better off using the roof of the music building."

I DIDN'T want to tell her that I had a great phobia for sledding and tobogganing. I've had it ever since my sled had gone off course at my hometown reservoir, and sent me crashing into a telephone pole. True.

Still, my roommate was unmoved. "Snowmobiling then?" she said, pouring herself some orange juice.

"Nope," I said. "Too much windburn, and Lord knows you get enough of that around this windtrap anyway."

"How about ice fishing?"

"Come on. The only kind of bite you ever get with that is frostbite."

My roommate let out an exasperated sigh. "Well, what winter activities do you like then? There must be something!"

I blotted the floor with the paper towels. "Mmmmm... yeah, sure there are. There's backgammon, MTV and Christmas shopping."

I pointed the Bounties tube at her. "Now that's challenge, Christmas shopping. Believe me!"

"Christmas shopping?!" She blurted, and proceeded to knock her orange juice off her desk. "What kind of winter sport is that?"

"Oh, I dunno. Look at it this way: it's warm and dry." I tossed my Pepsi can at the trashcan, and missed. "And I think we ought to go before the first snowfall. What do you say?"

My roommate rolled her eyes. "Just hand me the paper towels, will you?! E-gad."

A World Of Culture And Art Not Far Away

by Radell Roberts

Saturday afternoon shoppers stroll through town, some clad in black leather miniskirts, some in Indian skirts and draped shawls, others in straight cropped denims, oversized sweaters and stacked heel boots. Many sport asymmetrical hairstyles. Now and then, one stops to sit beside the streetside marigolds of an outdoor cafe on the way to the Starving Artists' Sale.

A few blocks east, a male student distributes Marxist literature on the University of Michigan campus' edge. Another student, in a loose tunic shirt, faded jeans, with unkempt beard and hair, rambles obliviously across the main walkway, piping melancholy, ethereal notes from his flute.

This is obviously not a Bowling Green weekend. No, these scenes represent an eclectic mix of American styles from the 60s and 80s, and contemporary Europe. The student in an alligator-stamped shirt and designer jeans would appear to be a tourist in Ann Arbor, Michigan, 60 miles north of Bowling Green.

Besides the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor offers an extensive variety of unique shops, bookstores, film and live theaters, and restaurants.

ENJOY DISCOVERING the small, authentic Lucky's Costumes, where a plume here or some sequins there can transport one to another time and place. Or spend some time browsing in the Middle Earth on South University, where live goldfish swim in the triple-level shell shaped fountain that decorates one nook, shelves spilling forth hand-crafted baskets and stoneware.

For everything not yet discovered, try Kerrytown Shops at North Fourth and North South Streets. In the Godfrey Building, first level, all sorts of collectables at Old Favorite Antiques can be found. Imported gifts from Korea are the specialty at Haver Imports.

If you enjoy literature of any sort, don't miss Borders Books on Liberty Street, the largest bookstore in the Midwest. Every imaginable type of book, from classical to science fiction, is available here.

It is no surprise that Ann Arbor has several book and art stores. Creativity and self-expression seem to be the town's only fad. A few simple lines of graffiti painted on stone walls appear to only threaten philosophies: "Property is theft and military is death."

FAMISHED FROM your shopping spree, you needn't go hungry for long in Ann Arbor. The Parthenon, on the corner of South Main and West Liberty, serves Greek fast-food from gyros to octopus, for the more courageous diner. You can enjoy a light meal of quiche, croissants, soups or sandwiches a half block further on South Main, complete with a selection from the international beer and wine list at the streetside Cuisine Limited pastry cafe. The Chez Crepe, next door, features delicious crepes for dinner and desert, including those filled with shrimp, chicken, fudge and cream.

Aside from these possibilities, you can also find Japanese, Mexican, vegetarian, German, Indian, and Afghanistan cuisine, along with seafood.

After-dinner entertainment abounds in Ann Arbor. Film buffs can enjoy Woody Allen flicks, Abbott and Costello, The Three Stooges, or relive "Casablanca" in theaters that feature a history of their own. The State Theater on the corner of Liberty and State has been divided into four small theaters since 1940.

You can also take in the magic of live theater. The Civic Theater on South Main will present six fine shows this year, including "The Philadelphia Story" in November and "Cabaret" in December. Or you can enjoy Professional Theater, said to be the finest theater in Ann Arbor. Their season includes two "Best of Broadway" selections and four Michigan Ensemble Theater performances including comedy about 18th century convention, "The Rivals" and Stindberg's contemporary, surreal "Miss Julie" in October.

For after-the-show relaxation, try one of Ann Arbor's many music rooms. The Ark, on Hill Street, serves as a showcase for American and international performers, set in a living-room atmosphere with coffee and popcorn provided.

The Blind Pig is Ann Arbor's most intimate music room with an emphasis on blues. Ashley's on South State Street specializes in relaxation with live performances on easy listening and jazz guitarists and pianists. Del-Rio-Bar and The Earle, both on West Washington, feature jazz entertainment, while The Heidelberg on North Main fills the room with, of course, German music and dancing.

Only an hour and a half away a world of culture and art is waiting. To get to Ann Arbor take I-75 north to I-475 to 23. Take your time to stroll amidst the crowd, smell the spice of marigolds and the enticement of warm croissants, as you listen to heady notes of flute on a breeze in Ann Arbor Michigan.

Museum Offers Galleries And More For Visitors

by Barbara Knisely

Even those without a vast knowledge of art will enjoy browsing the spacious corridors of the Toledo Art Museum, acclaimed as one of America's finest art galleries.

The museum, which offers more than American artwork, allows visitors to explore centuries of creativity from ancient Egypt to Europe with representatives in all art forms from sculptures to glass, prints and decorative arts.

Climbing the enormous marble steps of the Monroe Street entrance that lead to the interior main floor lobby, one discovers a gallery containing several samples of 20th Century American art. It is here that well-known artist Richard Estes displays one of his famous paintings, "Helene's Florist."

The painting depicts a red and white neon sign hanging above a sun-faded canvas awning flashing the shop's name that appropriately gives the painting its name.

Admiring the painting, visitors can almost smell the aroma of golden mums and tiny violets placed among numerous bunches of freshly cut flowers, wrapped loosely in tissue paper and held in tin cans on alternating wooden planks outside the shop window. The play of late afternoon light that cascades along the edge of a metal street grating, strewn with discarded cigarette butts, draws the admirer into the open glass door of the shop, where one can just barely detect the FTD florist sticker on the lower half of the glass panel. The artist has so articulately reproduced a photograph in oil that visitors often eye the canvas close up to inspect the fine details.

VISITORS CAN imagine themselves back in the times of the ancient Greeks, Romans and Egyptians by stepping into the next gallery. Samples of clay pots, storage jars and vases all displayed handsomely in glass cases, are decorated with stripes, bold massive shapes or designs depicting the creative talents of artists from as early as the 13th Century B.C.

The glass gallery housing exquisite examples of glassmaking from ancient times to the present, is next. The museum's collection of more than 2,000 pieces of American glass is among the leading collections in this field and contains a substantial number of pieces of high quality and historical importance.

So extensive is the museum's glass collection that it plans to publish an American glass catalog to be completed in 1985. An award of $100,000 from the Henry Luce Foundation in New York will help the museum prepare a book of its notable collection. A detailed description and illustration of each piece will serve as an historical survey of American glass.

Among the most eye-catching portraits housed in the 19th century American gallery is Ralph Albert Blakelock's "Brook By Moonlight." Ceiling spotlights intensify the densely wooded expanse of the immense painting, highlighting the cracked hues of raven black paint and giving them a wet appearance. The ominous branches of the trees are fused together in various shades of ebony and murky black creating an eerie, hypnotizing effect. One is drawn into the painting's depths by the moonlight above as it cascades its pale yellow beams, illuminating a tiny brook trickling through the dense forest.

LEADING BACK to the main lobby, visitors can travel through Italy, the Netherlands, Spain or France by viewing paintings, sculptures and furniture by masters of four centuries among the numerous European galleries. Included in these are the murals, landscapes and abstracts of Rubbens, El Greco, Van Gogh and Monet.

The ground floor of the museum contains an art supply store, an information booth and a large library where visitors may further study their favorite artists from the museum's book collection.

The Print Gallery, also located on the ground floor, displays short-term exhibits of photographs and prints of prominent artists.

The Collector's Corner, a small shop located near the Print Gallery, displays the works of talented, outstanding local artists for visitors to rent or purchase.

The Toledo Museum of Art offers a selection of adult art classes, lectures and workshops, in addition to drawing and music classes for children. The museum also attracts visitors from the area with its Peristyle Series of music, theater and dance.

Visitors can take the opportunity to lunch with friends or family at the newly remodeled cafe. The atmosphere and appetizing menu make a relaxing end to an enjoyable walk through the galleries of the Toledo Art Museum.

The various attractions at the Toledo Museum of Art make the 30 minute trip from the University well worth it. The museum is open Monday through Saturday and includes a cafe, galleries, relics and other regular features as well as special exhibits. The Toledo museum is also one of the few art museums in the country that regularly offers musical entertainment.
